Call to Worship (Adapted from Psalm 8) Brian Hueckroth

One: O God, when I look to your heavens, when I gaze upon the work of your fingers,

Many: When I study the moon and the stars, and all that you created,

One: When I consider the mountains and the seas, and the generations of creatures and peoples and communities,

Many: When I glance around at all that you have made,

One: I wonder... what are we, that you love us so?

Many: What are human beings, that you are so mindful of us, that you care so deeply for us?

One: I can feel so small. I can feel so unheard. I can feel so powerless.

Many: Yet, you know me. You notice me. You listen for me.

One: And you love me.

Many: O God, you love your children so very much.

One: And so, we gather in your presence, to celebrate your love, your works of power, your commitment to justice, your extension of grace....

Many: We gather in your presence, to marvel and wonder at all you do and all you are...

One: We gather to worship you, O Great Creator.

Many: Come, let us worship our God.
